Terms to know

- A broker-dealer (Kalos Capital, Inc) is a firm that acts as an intermediary between buyers and sellers of securities for which they will usually receive a commission.
- An investment adviser (Kalos Management, Inc) is generally any person or group that provides investment advice or conducts securities analysis in exchange for a fee.

What investment services and advice can you provide me?

We offer both brokerage services and investment advisory services.

Ways to work with us:

A dedicated Financial Advisor in a branch office setting can help you with both brokerage and investment advisory services. They can provide investment strategies, recommendations, and guidance specific to your needs and goals. You will also have full access to our full suite of products and services and in person full-service access, by phone, and by email.

Services Provided:

Our Brokerage Services: The primary service we offer retail investors in a brokerage relationship is the execution of transactions for your account. We may also provide other services, such as custody of your assets, market updates, and recommendations to buy, sell, or hold securities in your account.

Our Investment Advisory Services: The primary service we offer retail investors in an advisory relationship is investment advice. Our investment advisory services are available through different relationships, including discretionary managed account programs where we, affiliate, or a third party provide portfolio construction and management of your money and financial planning and consulting services. The services provided in our advisory programs are detailed in our advisory brochures.

Monitoring:

We do not offer or agree to provide monitoring in our brokerage relationships.

We provide periodic monitoring in our advisory programs, but not when providing financial planning services. Financial plans are provided on a one-time basis and do not include ongoing advice.

Investment Authority:

On the brokerage side when we make a recommendation to buy, sell, or hold securities in your account, you make the ultimate decision whether to follow the recommendation.

In discretionary managed account programs, we, an affiliate, or third party make the investment recommendations for you based on your investment objectives and risk tolerance. This authority to manage the account on your behalf lasts as long as you are enrolled in the program.

Limited Investment Offerings:

On the brokerage side our firm offers a broad spectrum of investment products, but we do not make available every investment product in the market. We offer third-party products and we do not seek to offer products that are necessarily the least expensive.

Each advisory program has its own unique set of products available. Thus, the products available in each advisory may be limited. We do not seek to offer products that are necessarily the least expensive.

Account Minimums and Other Requirements:

There is no minimum initial account balance to establish a brokerage account with us. However, you must sign and return a Client Agreement and fund the account or it will be closed.

Our advisory programs, except for financial planning services, each have minimum investment requirements. The advisory relationship is subject to the terms of the advisory agreement that you sign and does not begin until the agreement is accepted by us.

Services we do not provide:

We do not:

- Maintain proprietary accounts
- Conduct any investment banking business
- Write or disseminate any first party research reports
- Make markets in any securities
- Exercise discretion over commission-based brokerage accounts, or
- Provide investment monitoring on brokerage accounts (except for investment advisory accounts)
- Conduct sales contests

The investment products we offer are subject to minimum deposits and may vary between the products. The minimum deposits are outlined in each product's respective prospectus, agreement, and contract summaries.

What fees will I pay?

The services and fees for each type of service differ and it is important for you, the retail investor, to understand these differences.

- Our Brokerage Services: In a brokerage relationship, you are charged for each trade you make, also known as transaction-based charges. These transaction-based charges include commissions, which differ based on the product purchased, size of the transaction, overall value of your account, and frequency of trading activity in your account. You will pay higher total transaction-based charges when there are more trades in your account. Therefore, we have an incentive to encourage you to trade more often.
- As stated in your Client Agreement, you will be charged annual account fees and custodial fees that are based on the number and type of accounts you hold in your household.
- Our Investment Advisory Services: In most of our investment advisory relationships, you are charged an agreed-upon percentage of the assets held in your account, also known as an asset-based fee, each quarter. The standard fee varies by advisory program and covers the cost of our advice, custody of assets, manager fees (if applicable), and execution of most transactions. Because the fee is typically based on the value of your account, we have an incentive to encourage you to increase the assets in your account.

- We also offer advisory programs with other fee structures. In one program, you elect to pay for our services with either an asset-based fee or a commission for each transaction. Consulting services are available for a one-time flat fee, an ongoing flat fee, or an asset-based fee. Financial planning services are subject to a one-time flat fee, which does not cover the cost to implement the plan.
- Depending on the level of trading in your account, paying an asset-based fee could cost more or less than separately paying for each transaction.

- Other Fees – Applicable to both Brokerage and Investment Advisory Services

You may also incur other fees and costs related to your investments and brokerage or investment advisory services. These include: Mortality and Expense Fees associated with your annuity investments, mutual fund distribution fees, account maintenance fees, account termination fees, brokerage account trade ticket fees. You will be charged interest on the amount borrowed through margin loans and securities-based loans.

You will pay fees and costs whether you make or lose money on your investments. Fees and costs will reduce any amount of money you make on your investments over time. Please make sure you understand what fees and costs you are paying. You can find more detailed information about fees and costs related to our services as a broker-dealer and investment advisor in our:

The asset-based fees associated with the wrap fee program under the Investment Advisory program will include most transaction costs and fees to a broker-dealer or bank that has custody of these assets, and therefore are higher than a typical asset based advisory fee.

What are your legal obligations to me when providing recommendations as my broker-dealer or when acting as my investment adviser? How else does the firm make money and what conflicts of interest do you have?

When we provide you with a recommendation as your broker-dealer or act as your investment adviser, we have to act in your best interest and not put our interest ahead of yours. At the same time, the way we make money creates some conflicts with your interests. You should understand and ask us about these conflicts because they can affect the recommendations and investment advice, we provide you. Here are some examples to help you understand what this means.

- Third-Party Payments: Some third-party product providers pay us additional compensation as an incentive to sell their products. This creates an incentive for us to recommend third-party product providers that pay us additional compensation over those that do not pay additional compensation or that pay smaller amounts of additional compensation. Some third-party product providers pay us additional compensation in the form of a marketing allowance for the sale of their products.
- Revenue Sharing: Some managers or sponsors of products or other intermediaries share with us the revenue they earn on products, known as revenue sharing. This creates an incentive for us to recommend products where we receive revenue sharing over products for which we do not receive revenue sharing or receive smaller revenue sharing payments.

How do your financial professionals make money?

The amount of compensation your financial advisor receives is dependent upon several factors: the amount of client assets they service; the time and complexity required to meet a client's needs; the products they sell and associated commissions; and revenue the firm earns from advisory services and recommendations. Typically, a financial advisor's payout schedule increases with revenue generation and asset levels. Noncash compensation is provided to most financial advisors. They may attend educational meetings and recognition trips sponsored by external vendors, such as mutual fund companies, insurance carriers, or money managers. Financial advisors could also receive promotional items, meals, entertainment, and other noncash compensation from product providers. The receipt of noncash compensation and other from product providers creates an incentive for financial advisors to recommend those providers' products over other products

In a brokerage relationship, financial advisors receive a percentage of the fees, charges, and certain other revenue our firm collects from transactions in your account. As a result, financial advisors have an incentive to provide brokerage recommendations that result in selling more investment products and services, as well as investment products and services that carry higher fees and charges.

In an investment advisory relationship, financial advisors receive a percentage of the ongoing fees you pay. As a result, they have an incentive to recommend that you invest more assets in an advisory program, and depending on your anticipated level of trading activity, can have an incentive to recommend advisory programs instead of brokerage services when you engage in a limited number of transactions.

Our financial professionals also have moral, ethical, regulatory and legal obligations that work to counterbalance conflicts. These obligations are considered as they adjudicate any conflicts that arise. Kalos has established extensive policies and a Code of Conduct that creates robust controls to conform to our required regulatory requirements. We do all this in service of you, our client, and in honor of the deeply personal relationship you hold with your financial professional.

In many cases the financial professional conducting your brokerage relationship may also be serving in an advisory capacity. In this case the highest standard, that of fiduciary, applies. Our financial professionals work every day to serve their clients to the best of their ability, placing the client's best interest above their own. Their moral and ethical duties are to apply their vast experience and knowledge to your personal situation and construct a portfolio that takes your unique needs and outlook into account to the extent possible. The fees and commissions we earn are inextricably linked to the value you extract from the personal relationship you hold with your financial professional.

Do you or your financial professionals have legal or disciplinary history?
